

Chalmers Six-40

#1350 Seven Passenger

You ride in the Chalmers
Six-40—not on it

THERE may be those who take "with a grain of salt" the statement that a $1350 car can be made to ride as easily and be as comfortable as a car selling for $6000 or more.

Nevertheless, it is absolutely true that no car, at any price, rides any easier or is more comfortable than this $1350 Chalmers Six-40, and a ride in it will thoroughly convince you of this fact.

Comfort must be built into a car, but it is not difficult if you know how.

The seat backs and side walls of the Six-40 are built for comfort—according to scientific principles that years of experience have taught us.

The seats and side walls are deep and roomy, the upholstery is luxurious and is of full leather. The leg-room is ample.

Truly, you ride in this car—not on it.

The rear springs are 57 inches long—the longest on any car in the world at the price. Aside from the great comfort they give you will find that their resilient action will save you tire bills.

And, finally, there is always in the Six-40 the comfort of steady power—the quick acceleration—the easy, vibrationless pull of the marvelous valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor.

Let us show you some real motor car comfort. Let us do it to-day.

GEORGIE FOSTER

pop flies most of the way. Three times Tris Speaker had the good fortune to lead off for the Sox. Three times he stepped confidently to the batter's box and twice he "popped" to short and once he hit a slow infield bouncer.

This was not the entire batting record for Tris, however, for in the first inning he shot a screeching single to right which sent Hooper from first to third on his way home with the first run of the game. It was Speaker's first hit of the series and his batting average for the two games stands to-night at .167.

Foster Heavy Hitter

Although young Mr. Foster's occupation is supposed to be that of keeping the other fellows from hitting, he promises now to be the batting hero of the series, getting away today with an average of .750 in four times up. When the first faced the puzzling underhand delivery of Mayer, the Boston pitcher indignantly whiffed. This must have been a decoy, however, for the next time he advanced to the plate he high up against the right field wall for the first extra base hit of the series. He was left stranded. In the seventh Foster shot a single to center and again his teammates could not send him across despite the use of two pinch hitters. Foster evidently got tired of depending on the other eight athletes wearing the Boston uniform to help him home, so in the ninth with Gardner on second, and the score a tie, he decided to break up a perfect game of ball that seriously threatened to go to extra innings. He slammed a long single to right center and cantered to second when Paskert made a futile effort to cut off the winning run at the plate.

Cravath Gets Double

In the fifth inning it looked very much as if the Philadelphia players were going to bat out a victory in spite of the frowns of fortune. "Gavvy" Cravath laid into one in the fifth and sent it whistling down the left field foul line for a double. Luderus, not to be outdone, sent another double to deep center and Cravath ambled home. The crowd shouted and howled for Whitted to bring "Lady" home but the best Whitted could do, however, was an infield out from short to first, which advanced Luderus to third. Niehoff caught a fast one from Boston square on his bat and the fans roared as it sped away on a line only to smash with a "zip" into the mit of Boston's big guardian of the first bag, one Hoblitzell. This play took all the steam from the Phillies attack and Burns dashed the fast fading hopes of the fans on the rocks by striking out.

Mayer justified the confidence of Pat Moran in putting him forward as the second line of defense to the mighty Alexander despite the fact that the game went against him. Mayer was cool and calm at all times. He struck out seven men and allowed but two bases on balls, both of these going to Hooper.

Free Hitting Game

The free manner in which the other players were meeting the ball, however, kept the fans on edge and made it a ball game from start to finish. The players were aggressive and this had a corresponding effect upon the fans.

The fact that President Wilson and Mrs. Galt were to witness today's game gave an unusual air of excitement to the preliminaries at the ball park. The decorations were out early and had the presidential box aglow with the national and city colors.

It was just after 2 o'clock time for play to be called, that a shout outside the park gave the signal that the president was at hand. A few minutes later he entered with Mrs. Galt behind him. As they started for their seats, however, the president asked Mrs. Galt to precede him. Looking remarkably handsome and glowing with happiness, Mrs. Galt was quickly recognized by the crowd and had to join the president in acknowledging the tribute of the throng. After reaching their place in the stand Mr. Wilson and his fiancée graciously consented to pose for the photographers and the game was delayed several minutes.

"Many beautifully clad women had invaded the playing field to get a close view of the next first lady of the land and there was some little difficulty in clearing the pasture of the hard working athletes in whose honor the festivities had been arranged.

President Wilson Starts Game

Then President Wilson tossed out a ball to Pitcher Mayer and the game was on. The first pitch went high and wide of the plate and Hooper did not offer at it. Catcher Burns was about to toss the sphere back to Mayer for continued play when Umpire Rigler stopped him, took the ball away and gallantly presented it to Mr. Wilson while the crowd roared its approval. Mr. Wilson stowed the ball in one of his overcoat pockets, bought a score card for ten cents and settled down to a thorough enjoyment of the game.

Both teams, considered as units and the players as individuals, gave an exhibition of real world's series baseball today and left nothing to be desired in the skillful handling of the sphere and correct judgment in the field and on the bases.

Burns Makes Only Error

While Foster was of course the hero of the day, every member of the two teams was keyed close to the perfection point and the only error in the game, charged against Catcher Burns was an excusable one. The two infielders and outfielders were faster than in the opening struggle, due to the firm, sure footing for the ground had dried out thoroughly and there was little chance of the slippage which marred several of the plays Friday.

In the two games to date the Boston players have made eighteen hits for a total of three runs, while the Phillies have accumulated four runs on eight hits.

On individual batting the Red Sox lead, Lewis, Gardner and Foster all being tied with three hits apiece. Hooper, Hoblitzell and Barry come next with two each. The score:

CORNER STONE

Of Science Hall at Marshall College to Be Laid on October 16.

HUNTINGTON, Oct. 9.—October 16 is to be a notable date in the history of Huntington and that of Marshall college, especially as on that day the corner stone of the new science hall will be laid. This building, one of the best equipped and constructed school edifices in the state will stand as a monument to the activities of the alumni association, for through the effort of the members the fight for the buildings was kept up in the face of almost insurmountable odds.

To give the ceremonies due prominence the Masonic lodge has consented to take charge of the laying of the stone, with Rev. John Conter, the eminent botanist of the University of Chicago, making the principal address. Educators and prominent political and business men

WESLEYAN RELIES ON FORWARD PASS

To Beat West Virginia in Their Annual Game at Fairmont Thanksgiving.

BUCKHANNON, Oct. 9.—The two main factors in West Virginia football, West Virginia University, and West Virginia Wesleyan college, have been creating more excitement and attracting more attention in sporting circles in West Virginia than the world's series.

Football is gaining in popularity every year and this is especially true of West Virginia. So far this year, West Virginia University has rather monopolized the attention of the football fans for the very good reason that its early schedule contained two games of very great importance while Wesleyan's card called for two contests that offered little to interest West Virginia football lovers.

West Virginia University made a fine showing against Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. Although beaten 7 to 0, by a team that is always expected to be a late starter West Virginia played a hard uphill game and gained the commendation of eastern sporting writers generally.

Plays Good Game

Developments since that time, however, have indicated that Pennsylvania is not off to a late start this year as she trimmed Albright 64 to 0 and also won from Franklin and Marshall, but not by a decisive score. West Virginia also played a good game with Washington and Jefferson. Washington and Jefferson have barely been able to beat Geneva 6 to 0, and to all appearances lacks a whole lot of that finish that appeared in last year's Red and Black aggregation, but all the same it has a defensive team that can be classed but little below that team that last year won from Yale and practically tied Harvard.

Therefore, West Virginia's feat of scoring on Washington and Jefferson in a perfectly legitimate manner deserves as much recognition as its allowing West Virginia University to score on it deserves criticism of an adverse nature. A weakness on the forward pass again develops and many followers of the Old Gold and Blue have cold chills at the remembrance of certain happenings along this line Thanksgiving. It is apparent that West Virginia must build up a more versatile and profitable offense.

In general, however, it can be said that the university team is stronger by twenty-five per cent than last year.

Strikes Snag

Wesleyan, on the other hand, looked mighty good in her opening game with a weak team by showing brilliantly on the offense and not allowing a single first down against its defense. It struck a snag a week later, however, in Washington and Lee and either through lack of conditioning or because of stage fright allowed the Blue and White to triumph in easy fashion. The Washington and Lee game was lost apparently through the lack of a capable defense. The offense gained much ground but lost much ground on kicks and failure to properly cover them.

Since Wesleyan has had championship teams, however, there has never been a really good defensive team at Buckhannon. Working on the theory that "a good offense is a good defense" and scoring more points than the other fellow, the Orange and Black coaches have consistently devoted much time to the development of point-gaining plays and not so much time to tackling and blocking.

How well this system has worked is apparent in the record of the teams. This year the finest opportunity is offered for the building of a scoring machine that has ever offered for instead of having to depend almost solely on forward passing as in the past. Wesleyan was in Blake, Beck, Miller, Singleton and Shumaker as fast a set of end running and line have been invited to be present.

The exercises are to begin at 2 o'clock and at the conclusion the Marshall-Marquette football game will begin on Marshall field. It is thought that for these two events, more alumni will return than for any other thing during the year.

DEAD RAT CAUSES NEWSPAPER WAR

Salem Editors Argue Propriety of Killing Rat in the Street.

SALEM, Oct. 9.—An editorial controversy has arisen between the two local newspapers over the death of a rat, whose lifeless body was found on the street in front of the postoffice a few weeks ago. It appears that a business man passing the postoffice met a large rat on the sidewalk and planted his trusty foot on the big rodent's head and moved it into the street, not taking time to give it burial. The dead rat fell under the eagle eye of the editor of the Salem Herald, who proceeded to gently remonstrate over the dead rat on the street. The editor of the Express goes to the defense of the man who deprived the rodent of its life, giving the act high praise.

The controversy still continues, and since wars have originated on small things, we do not venture to predict the outcome of the situation, and the fact that two persons see a matter different.

The Salem public schools are now well organized for the term and
